

Williams Mills Conservation Area Town of Gloucester R.I.

Williams Mills Conservation Area (W.M.C.A.) is 132 acres of woodland owned by the Town of Gloucester. In 2005 the Factory Mutual Engineering Corp. sold this land to the Town for one dollar, with the restriction that it be used for public purposes such as recreational, park or open space. In 2009 the Gloucester Town Council designated the Gloucester Conservation Commission as the steward of the property with the authority to set rules and regulations regarding use of the property.

W.M.C.A. is named after Alphonso P. Williams who, with Stephen S. Sweet, operated water powered grist, shingle, and board mills on the north side of Killingly Road in the late 1800's. Long time Gloucester residents may also know this area as Babbitt's Corner, named after the family who owned property at the junction of Killingly, Sheldon, and Reynolds Road in the early 20th century.

Williams Mills Conservation Area is open to the public every day, year round from sunrise to sunset. W.M.C.A. is on the south side of Killingly Road at town's western boundary with Killingly, Connecticut. To find Killingly Road and W.M.C.A. from Putnam Pike (U.S. Route 44) take Reynolds Road (R.I. Route 94) south for two miles, or from Hartford Pike (R.I. Route 101) take Reynolds Road (R.I. Route 94) north for four miles.

Limited off-road parking space is available at three signed areas along Killingly Road.
